David,

The company's legal name is Lancaster Telephone Company, and that is the name they use on carrier contracts. They do have the authority to use the trade name Comporium, so when it comes to consumers, they generally do business under the name Comporium. I hope that helps. If you have any other questions, please let me know.

[EXTERNAL EMAIL]

Peg:

We have what is probably a very elementary question, but it has to do with the above-noted interconnection agreement. I know that, at one time, the name of Lancaster Telephone Company also had a "d/b/a Comporium" suffix in most transactions. We noticed that Mr. Lunsford of Comporium was copied on the transmittal letter when the interconnection agreement was filed. However, we also noted that the Agreement filed is solely in the name of "Lancaster Telephone Company," and Comporium is not mentioned in the Agreement. Having not had much contact with these matters for awhile, could you please explain why we are only seeing "Lancaster Telephone Company," and not "Lancaster Telephone Company d/b/a Comporium" in the Agreement?

Thanks,
David Butler
